

Attention Republicans, Democrats, Greens and undeclareds:

At a time when the country is divided over so many issues, Dear George offers not escapism, but a play that actually makes us think and come together. - Anchorage Daily News

A Bi-Partisan play, compiled from over 1500 open letters to President Bush written in the summer of 2004. 40 theatres coast to coast have presented Dear George this October, now "Dear George" comes home to New York City the last two night before the election.

West 50th Street Productions proudly presents

Dear George: Letters to the President

Created by Marcus Woollen

Directed by Jonathan Znidarsic

a Benefit for the Actor's Fund of America

Featuring Guest Appearances By

Rue McClanahan Rex Reed

Tina Louise Rachel York

Margo Martindale

Marcus Woollen, Robert Driemeyer,
Vic DiMonda, Jesse Johnson, Meredith Lucio, Julia Tilley and many more

October 31 & November 1 at 7 pm

at

The Culture Project 45 Bleecker Street

All Tickets $45 at TheaterMania.com or (212) 352-3101

Believe it or not, there still is something called a bipartisan event in this world.

-Penn State Collegian

They're all there: the lovers, the haters and even a few in-betweeners.

-Honolulu Weekly

Determined to put a human face on the rift that public opinion polls only hint at, Marcus Woollen asked the American Public to write open letters to the commander in chief. The writers professed a range of opinions on every issue, including the war in Iraq, the economy, gay marriage and 9-11.

-Lawrence Journal-World

The letters come from all 50 states, were penned by Americans of varied backgrounds and political viewpoints, and are evenly divided between those who approve and disapprove of the president.

-Austin Chronicle

The intensity of emotions involved makes "Dear George" an opportunity for healing as well as enlightenment.

-The Charlotte Observer

www.DearGeorgeLetters.com